- Today, we take a moment to remember a significant event in our nation's history. On this day, 23 years ago, our country experienced a great tragedy during the attacks of September 11, 2001. Many lives were lost, and countless others were forever changed. As we go through our day, let's take time to honor the courage of the first responders, the strength of the families who lost loved ones, and the resilience of our nation in the face of adversity. Let us now observe a moment of silence as we reflect on the lives lost and the impact of that day.
